START YOUR DISTILLERY IN BOW ISLAND

Alberta's Palliser region is home to some of the best ingredients in the world, with excellent market access into Alberta's major cities. Experienced distillers in Alberta and British Columbia are seeking new places to make their spirits.

A small group of local investors would have the means to bring distilling to the town of Bow Island. Surrounded by world-class ingredients, available talent, market access, and some local investment dollars, a craft distillery is a real possibility.

DISTILLING TALENT

There is an opportunity for investors to draw on this existing talent pool of craft distillers to handle the day-to-day operations and ensure their community is known for high quality spirits. If distilling is a passion, three week courses are offered at working distilleries across North America.

GROWTH STORY

There are 24 craft distilleries in Alberta, with nearly 80 in British Columbia. This indicates there is ROOM FOR ABOUT 60 MORE distilleries in Alberta. Craft distilling is part of a larger trend of consumers seeking locally-produced, high-quality food, beverages, and other consumables. CRAFT DISTILLING IN BOW ISLAND

A Bow Island-based distillery has easy access to Calgary's 1.3 million population, Lethbridge's 93,000 population and Medicine Hat's 63,000 population. Foremost is in the heart of Canada's best agricultural growing region, surrounded by high quality crops, irrigation, and a well-populated regional market. Add in a highly motivated, entrepreneurial population rooted in agricultural production and Bow Island has all the ingredients to open a successful distillery.

Rural distilleries are popping up across the province, proving remoteness is not a restricting factor.

Regulations: Think Fire Code

Alberta Gaming and Liquor is important, but more important are provincial and municipal fire codes. Be sure your proposed facility works closely with your fire department to avoid costly overruns.

Electric vs Steam Distilling

Electric stills are less expensive than steam, but restrict what product you'll be able to produce. Steam provides potential for a greater product range, including whiskey and other coloured liquor.

WHAT OTHERS ARE SAYING ABOUT CRAFT DISTILLING

Josh McLafferty, Owner, Monashee Spirits

“Oh my god there is so much demand locally. I'm getting emails and phone calls from Whistler, Vancouver Island, Comox. They're all saying they want two cases. Stat.”

Geoff Stewart, Owner,
Rig Hand Craft Distillery

“I don't feel that craft distillers in Alberta are really competing with one another. There's enough market out there for everybody to be successful.”

Lyndsey Smiley, Owner, Raw Distillery

“When we secured a space in Canmore there were only three craft distilleries in the province ... Now there are 19 [with more in the works]. I am truly hoping we will be able to see collaborations between distilleries.”

David Farran, President,
Eau Claire Distillery

“There has been a slight cultural change with people drinking less and moving to quality products. This has also helped open the opportunity for producers of premium, craft spirits.”
